The OHSAA defines that this award goes to a female athlete who demonstrates through play and sportsmanship the total philosophy of athletics. The recipient is choosing to play this game because it affords her the opportunity to use her skills, grow in character, serve others and be part of something bigger than herself. This female athlete loves her sport(s) for this reason and enjoys the competition. In turn, the athlete respects her sport by treating everyone involved with respect including opponents, coaches, officials, scorekeepers, ball boys and girls, groundskeepers, ticket takers, announcers and anyone else who makes the game possible. This player does not throw equipment, dress improperly, wear any type of clothing that would dishonor the game or the school, use foul language, or engage in any behavior that hurts the team's reputation or ability to compete and be successful. The female student athlete who best exhibits these qualities is:

Tayrismar Mendez Tirado of Austintown Fitch for the sports of Soccer and Cross Country
